

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

To His Excellency Samuel W. Pennypacker, Governor of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania:

Sir: I have the honor to present to you herewith a report of the Department of Factory Inspection for the year ending December 31, 1905.

With great respect,

Yours very sincerely,

J. C. DELANEY,
Chief Factory Inspector.

REPORT OF CHIEF FACTORY INSPECTOR.

The number of establishments inspected during the year ended December 31st, 1905, was 14,642. As the number of establishments inspected during the year prior was 16,589, it would appear, were no explanation offered, that there was a decrease in the number of establishments inspected during the year 1905, whereas there was an increase of 932 in the number of factories and mercantile establishments inspected. This apparent decrease is attributable to the change in the law relating to the inspection of workshops commonly called "sweat shops" by which change about 2,880 family workers in 2,880 dwelling houses were properly placed under the sole jurisdiction of the Boards of Health. This change in the law enabled the deputy factory inspectors in the City of Philadelphia especially, to devote more time and attention to the business of inspecting factories and large manufacturing establishments, a business of far greater importance than that of inspecting bed chambers and family living rooms.

Many of the establishments were inspected twice during the year and some as many as four times, the number of inspections depending on the conditions existing in the several establishments. Statistical summaries by counties and by grand division of industry accompany this report. They present in tabulated forms, the work performed by the deputy factory inspectors. Believing, however, that long tables of statistics are more bewildering than instructive to the average seeker of information, I have, in this narrative form, made use of them under special chapters where their great virtue can be seen and comprehended at a glance.

ACCIDENTS.

The number of fatal accidents for the year 1905 was 162 and the number of non fatal was 923. Moving cranes and their appendages caused the death of 90, and injuries to 110 employes. Unguarded machinery caused the death of 26, and serious and slight injuries to 701. The serious injuries for the most part consisted of the loss of finger joints upon machines worked by foot power, and always under the control of the operative. As yet no plan has been devised by which these machines can be properly guarded without destroying their effectiveness, although the department has solicited the services of skilled mechanics and has been aided by the owners of such machines. By jumping upon elevators in motion 10 persons were killed and 49 injured. One person was killed by falling down an open elevator shaft. By contact with circular saws 4 persons were killed and 57 injured, these accidents being the result in nearly every instance of employes removing the safety guards. In the adjustment of belting upon wheels and shafting without shutting off the power 26 were killed and 52 injured. In but three of these accidents were the belts unguarded, the injured parties in all other cases being wholly responsible for the accidents which befell them. A bursting fly wheel caused the death of 4 persons and injuries to a like number. A bursting saw killed one person and a bursting emery wheel killed one and injured four other employes.

Since the enactment of the act of May 2nd, 1905, a vigorous and persistent warfare has been waged against the projecting set screws, that fruitful source of many deaths and painful injuries. In the guarding of cogs, wheels, belts, &c., 1,008 orders were issued, of which orders 786 were complied with, and efforts are being made to secure safety appliances in all cases. To guard belts, set screws and machinery in general, it requires nothing more than a will to do so and the expenditure of a little money. But there are some machines to safe guard which, and at the same time do not render their productive power nugatory, that will require the skill of an inventive genius at present unknown. The almost uniform disposition of those in charge of industrial power-using establishments is to safe guard belts, shafting and machinery, but there are some who have shown a disposition to do nothing except under compulsion.

It should be understood, however, that the accidents above mentioned are such only as come within the jurisdiction of this department to prevent, if possible. Besides these, numerous accidents in the prevention of which this department has no jurisdiction, and some of the most shocking in character have occurred. How many it is not possible to state, but the number is probably not less than two thousand each year. Beneath the roofs of iron mills and furnaces and in the yards appurtenant thereto the slaughter of employes is a matter of daily occurrence. In some of the largest of these mills the temporary morgue seems to be as necessary a part of the establishment as the stock house or the business office, and human life in and about such establishment would appear to be the cheapest of all raw materials. The stockholders who know these establishments as things producing dividends; the manager who shifts responsibility upon the superintendent; the superintendent who gives orders to the foreman and the foreman to some petty bosses are each and all apparently imbued with but the single idea of having the work pushed and rushed to the extreme limit of human endurance. An explosion of gas, a slipping of the furnace, a cave-in of a furnace stock, a tilted ladle, a cracked converter, an overturning of a pile of iron, the breaking of a rotten scaffold, the onrush of the unguarded and signalless crane, the backing of engines and cars without flagmen or bellmen, these are some of the most common of death-dealing agencies which make human life in and about iron mills and locomotive works as precarious as upon a field of battle.

And for all this slaughter there is given by the heads of such establishments but one answer. An answer stereotyped in its phrasing, and as measured and monotonous as the tick tick of a pendulum, "Carelessness on the part of the injured person."

To read these answers one would be compelled, did he accept them as true, to believe that the hardy, honest toilers are not working for wages but for an opportunity to commit suicide or to lose a limb, the question of wages and the support of a family being but mere side issues to them.

What is imperatively needed is a stringent law that will make the employers responsible in damages for deaths and other accidents occurring to their employes, either as the result of negligence on the part of employers or on the part of fellow employes to whom has been given any directing and supervising control. Such a law is in force in England with good results, it having reduced the death and injury list to a minimum. New York State has recently passed an act making railroad companies responsible for deaths and injuries resulting from the carelessness of the companies and those in their employ, a measure demanded by the great number of fatal and serious accidents occurring to employes whilst engaged in the performance of their duties.

For saving a life upon the field of battle, men are wearing medals of honor; humane societies have bestowed medals upon those who rescue the drowning; the Press heaps its plaudits upon the firemen who prevent a holocaust; the government maintains life-saving stations upon the sea coast; millions of dollars are expended upon hospitals in which death is combatted by every art known to surgery and medicine; asylums are richly endowed for the care and maintenance of the insane whose better life has ceased to exist; and in countless homes there have always been and will always be unstinted out-pourings of solicitude and money to ward off the dreaded hand of death. Indeed life is so precious that the State never deprives a person of it except for some heinous crime; and the one who takes his or her own life is charitably supposed to have been temporarily insane. All this being true even to the extent of being common-place citations of well known and well worn facts, why should human life have less value in a mill or a factory than in any or in all of the aforementioned places or under any of the aforementioned circumstances? What gross incongruity is this in human nature that rescues the sailor from the perils of the sea and places stumbling blocks of death in the pathway of the man who works in the mill or the factory?

It is true that some employes are injured as a result of what seems to have been their own carelessness and that others are injured as a result of their own foolhardiness. But in the multiplicity of accidents such cases are rare, by far the greater number of deaths and serious injuries being the result of gross indifference on the part of employers for the safety of their employes.

Foreigners who can neither speak nor understand English, who are unacquainted with the duties they will be called upon to perform, who know nothing of the dangers incident to their employments are hired by droves and given over to the tender mercies of a petty boss who sets them at work. They are willing workers, and coming from countries where work, rush, and the inordinate desire to get rich quick are not the only aims in life, and where the governments have rigid and just laws to protect employes, they naturally expect and have a right to expect of their employers an over-sight for their welfare as befitting men who should be guardians as well as masters. These men are told of no dangers, and when killed or crippled are put aside to make room for new victims. How any man can reconcile such want of care and over-sight for those in his employ with Christian principles and common humanity is beyond comprehension. But no matter how reconciled to these conditions such employers may be, they do not receive encouragement from the better class of employers.

Where this department has jurisdiction in the safeguarding of machinery, elevators, fly wheels, boilers, pits, vats, &c., great good has resulted to the employes; many accidents, fatal and otherwise, once so common, being of rare occurrence, and then only when the deputy inspectors had failed to perform their duties, or where the safeguard had been taken off by the parties injured.

To protect life and limb the most urgent and explicit orders have been issued by this Department to all deputy inspectors. Some have carried out the letter and the spirit of these orders, whilst others, through negligence or ignorance, have not done so in all cases. It may not be amiss in this connection to say that, the injured and the representatives of the killed should they find proof of negligence in the safeguarding of machinery on the part of the deputy factory inspectors of the district wherein the accidents occurred, should bring suit for damages against such inspectors.

As the head of this Department I want all employes to be as safe in their employments as the proper nature of the employments will permit, and to this end will welcome any and all practicable methods to secure such safety.

BAKESHOPS.

During the year there were 1,927 bakeshops inspected. In these shops 11,575 persons were employed. A few large shops employ as many as two hundred persons each, but the average bakeshop is a concern employing two persons only.

In most of these small shops the persons employed are members of the family residing upon the premises, the shops being parts of the tenements. From these small shops delivery wagons never issue, the trade being circumscribed to near neighbors who make their purchases over the counter. This, in effect, makes each purchaser an inspector, and as the mixing room is closely adjacent to the room in which the bread and pastry are sold, foul odors or any uncleanness is detected. It is in shops of this character that the family cat or dog sometimes strays to the horror of some good, but sensitive souls who keep favorite pets in their own kitchens. However the crusade against these incursions of the dog and cat has had its effect as during the past year there were but two instances in which cats were found in the mixing or baking rooms.

It is in the larger shops where the customers can neither see nor smell conditions that one might more reasonably expect to find a disregard for sanitary conditions of a high order. As a fact, however, there were but three instances where the odors were so noisome as to require the issuance of orders for a change in the drainage. The odors incident to the mixing of large batches of dough are not of themselves agreeable to all persons, but they are odors incident to the trade which must be borne.

The law requiring that walls be lime-washed or painted, and that floors be tightly joined necessitated the issuance of orders in 305 shops but in other particulars the sanitary conditions were good.

In Philadelphia the conditions are but little, if any, different from conditions existing in other cities. Besides the regular deputy factory inspectors, a special deputy was employed to go into each inspection district and make a thorough inspection of bakeshops, large and small. There were 575 bakeshops inspected in which 4,261 persons were employed.

Like in other districts in the State, there were found shops, 91 in all that needed fresh paint or lime wash and some in which the floors were old and disjointed. But treating them as bakeshops and not as parlors or reception rooms there were but two instances where the conditions were such as to induce the inspectors to refuse a permit absolutely. The crusade against unsanitary bakeshops has been so long continued that the law affecting their sanitary conditions is well known and understood by all the bakers, and is being generally observed.

BOILERS.

The act of May 2nd, 1905, section 19, which compels the inspection of steam boilers by casualty companies or other competent parties approved by the Chief Factory Inspector has been fruitful in good results.

From the time the act went into operation until the close of the year, inspections of boilers by casualty companies, and in a few instances by persons approved by me, numbered in all four hundred and seventy-nine. These inspections were of additional value because the firms making the inspections had practically endorsed their reports by issuing insurance policies upon the boilers. Prior to the passage of the act aforesaid, boiler inspections, except in large establishments, were not of a character that would insure safety to the boilers or to those employed near to them.

Under the present law it is mandatory that steam boilers be inspected without an order to that effect being first issued by this Department. This leaves a justly wide open door for the collection of damages where injuries occur from explosions of boilers not properly inspected. It also enables some of the deputy factory inspectors to attend to business of more importance and of less expense than that of hunting up boilers in saw mills and dairies located in out of the way places.

CHILD LABOR.

The percentage of children employed between the ages of 14 and 16 years to the total of all employes in the industrial establishments inspected, is about five and one-third per cent., the number being 48,519 children, and the total of all employes being 906,708.

The number of children exceeds that reported for the year 1904 by 7,379. This is attributable to two causes: The present law which gives this Department a larger field for investigation than was ever given to it before, and to special investigations and inspections made by deputy factory inspectors.

Since June, 1905, when the new act went into operation, strenuous efforts have been made to obtain, as nearly as possible, the number of children under the age of 16 years employed in or about establishments subject to inspection by this department.

So much has been written and said by magazines and newspaper critics about the "millions of undersized and underfed children swarming in the factories and workshops," north and south, and much of this to the discredit of Pennsylvania, that a rigid and searching inquiry into the truth or falsity of these statements was deemed timely and necessary. It was said, and no doubt the statement will be often repeated, that five millions of little children scattered through the several States and territories are employed at gainful occupations, and chiefly in mills, shops, stores and factories. The ages of these "little children" are never presented to the public, but there is always the bold insinuation that they are of any age from 13 down to 8, though 11 and 12 appears to catch the fancy of the writers and declaimers as being the precocious and the pathetic age limit. No doubt there are such infants employed in defiance of law, morals and humanity, but the number is so few and the cases so far apart that they neither point a moral nor adorn a tale; though they serve as models and frightful examples through the medium of the snap-shot camera agitators.

Under the law of this Commonwealth children under the age of 14 years cannot be employed in any industrial establishment and children between the ages of 14 and 16 years cannot be employed in any industrial establishment unless they have first been given an employment certificate prepared and issued in conformity with the law. It will be well to remember, therefore, when examining the statistics of child labor that the 48,519 children reported as being employed are, many of them, very near the 16 year limit in age, many others are 15 years of age and beyond, and that 14 years is the age status of the remainder.

As a matter of fact in a total of 6,329 children who were dismissed by the factory inspectors during the past year, 5,321 of that number had passed their fourteenth year and possessed every legal qualification except that they had failed to observe the law requiring the obtaining of an employment certificate.

The deputy factory inspectors were instructed to report, and did so report the cause for the dismissal of all children. The dismissals to secure accuracy were classified as follows: "For want of certificates," "For illiteracy," "For being under age." The result shows that only 763 children in a total of 6,329 illegally employed were under the age of 14 years. Or to place the situation in a stronger light, that in a total of 48,519 children employed, 5,321 did not have proper employment certificates, 763 were under the age of 14 years and 245 could neither read nor write the English language. Here then, after the most careful inspections it is found that in a total of nearly one million of employes, male and females, less than eight hundred were under the age of 14 years.

Suppose, for the satisfaction of the captious, that all under age were not discovered. It is probably true that all were not discovered, for not all violators of law, be they burglars or assassins, are caught, and it would be a miracle were this Department to discover all attempts to frustrate the factory law. The deputy factory inspectors are, for the greater part, fairly honest and fairly competent at least. By neglecting to enforce the law, they disregard the express commands of the department's Chief, incur his censure and profit in nothing. Besides there are trailers in the persons of special deputies to go over the districts of those suspected of delinquencies. And yet rather than minimize, let the number of children under 14 years reported as found and dismissed by the deputy factory inspectors be multiplied by two and then what? About 1,500 in a total of nearly one million of employes are under 14 years of age! To the credit of this Commonwealth, the parents and the children too, the number is some fifty thousand below the insinuated total in the child labor fables of the magazines and tracts.

The charge, too, of the gross illiteracy of these children is not borne out by the facts. The total number of such children, 245, being no doubt far less than could be found in any large city among children running the streets and alleys. With the exception of this small number, all the employed children could read and write, and some of them, indeed the greatest number, had a good, working knowledge of grammar, history, geography and common arithmetic.

Though it may appear "unnecessary" if not "disgraceful" that nearly fifty thousand children even under 16 years of age should be at gainful occupations instead of at school, though some persons living in a Commonwealth that expends millions of dollars for the erection of schools, payment of teachers and free text books can find no good reason for the absence of these children from school, yet the reasons abound and are not hard to find. That this is an age of unwonted prosperity is granted, but prosperity does not come to all at the same time; when it does the millenium will have arrived. There is much poverty and hardship in the land. There always was and always will be many persons who know but little of prosperity and who are too poor or too honest to share in most of its benefits. For such the schools have a charm, but the workshop is a necessity. With them it is not a case of choice, but a condition of must. It is a constant struggle, not for luxuries, but for rent, food and raiment. The idle, dissolute parent content to exist upon the small earnings of his or her children is with us; but the number of such wretches is few compared with the greater number of parents whom misfortune in various shapes has compelled to send their little ones to the mines, the shops and the factories rather than to school. For all such free schools and free text books avail not; they but accentuate the deep misery of conditions by holding out a promise of the unattainable. Deep in the heart of every parent is the love for the child. It requires no act of legislation to compel a parent to do for the child that which God and all nature animate and inanimate have taught the parent to do ever since creation's dawn. There are those who see the children at work, but who never look behind the scenes. The compelling force which set the children at work is to them and for them an unknown quantity; so in their honest but mistaken zeal for the children they would deprive them of their earnings and thus substitute a deeper woe for an intended blessing.

Child labor at any stage is not a cause to be condemned but a result to be deplored. To condemn child labor as the cause of the idleness of adults or for non attendance at school is folly. The cause is not in the children nor in the parents, but in the economic conditions. Child labor regulations at best are but as poultice to injuries which have their seat deeper down than the tissues. Such poultices but serve to cover and uncover the wound intermittantly. They never cure. For 84 years has England legislated against the employment of children. Her laws are more drastic and more protective of children than any laws that have been passed in any of the States of our Union, but yet the curse of child labor exists there as it did when George the Fourth was king, and for the same reason that it exists here, viz: the necessity for work if one would eat.

The spinning wheel and distaff were not attended by children, nor when the hand looms came were children fettered to their fronts, nor did the introduction of power looms cause any commotion in the infant bazaars. It was not until the machinery was simplified, made automatic; and when men profiting by a thousand dollars per annum saw the opportunity to make those thousands millions that the child displaced the adult at the looms and the winding machines. And so with many kinds of machines until the children became factory fixtures in countless industries. That cry of humanity, that lesson from the Sermon on the Mount which proclaimed, indirectly, that adult labor should have some of the profits from inventions, were unheard or if heard were not hearkened to. One generation of idle adults produced a succeeding age of employed children, and age upon age have added to the number.

The State could summarily cause the dismissal of all children under 16 years of age and close each shop or factory or mine where its edict was not obeyed. On the other hand, the State might take cognizance of the fact that it is a condition and not a theory that confronts many poor families. It could take the children of such families away from the looms, the bench and the counter. It could send them rejoicing to school by giving to their parents the same amount of money the children had earned when at work. This of course after proper investigation by this Department, assisted by the local authorities.

There is another remedy for the disease of child labor that has lately been successfully introduced in some of the cotton mills of the South. In one mill where a child was employed who made one band for a spindle in ten minutes, an improved machine requiring no labor of any kind furnished a band every minute. This is cheaper than child labor; so the children had to move on. In other mills the weaving looms have been so much improved that one child instead of tending six or eight looms can now run from sixteen to twenty-eight.

In the West improved machinery in some of the glass making establishments have made unnecessary the employment of the small boys. What has transpired in the South and West in these particulars will eventually transpire here in this Commonwealth. This perfection of machinery will go on and on until, in the end, the children in our power factories will have been supplanted by automatic things that require no other food or drink than a little oil, and that need no raiment, nor parents to support. And then what will the children of poor parents do? The child labor problem will then no doubt be solved, but will that solve the child question when the child has no employment and has not the food and raiment necessary for attendance at school?

Mindful, therefore, of present economic conditions affecting parents and children both, I do not think it wise to encourage the efforts of those who are still seeking to raise the age limit for the employment of children from 14 years to 16 years.

In my last report, for the year 1904, I called attention to the startling fact that in the number of children employed, the males were but little in excess of the females. For the year 1903, the excess of males in a total of 32,758 children employed was only 1,278. For the year 1904, in a total of 41,117 children employed the excess of males was only 1,094. And now the returns for the past year, 1905, show that in a total of 48,519 children employed, the female children numbered 23,755 but 1,013 less than the number of males.

Surely there is something wrong somewhere in a civilization that presents such a spectacle to the eyes of statesmen, humanitarians and philosophers. And whatever the wrong, its remedy has not been found in any factory laws or regulations heretofore enacted or suggested. The real remedy, doubtless, lies in a reconstruction of present economic methods, a reconstruction that will recognize and abide by those principles promulgated on the Mount for the guidance of all generations.

My own experience as a child working in the coal mines, my after efforts for a school education, my contact since manhood with person of all classes, my knowledge of the total or partial failure of laws enacted for the amelioration of conditions to which poor mortals are subjected, have taught me the full value of that angelic salutation "Peace on earth to men of good will." It is after all only by receiving the eternal truths in good will and faith that men can know how to love their neighbors as themselves. When this will have been done all the good will follow, but not until then.

FIRE ESCAPES.

The erection of fire escapes upon industrial establishments, hotels, schools, places of amusement and other buildings enumerated in the law, is a source of gratification. An old building subject to the fire escape law that is not now provided with a fire escape is a rarity. During the year inspections were made of 794 buildings which had not been provided with fire escapes at the time of the last prior inspection. With the exception of a number of tenement and apartment houses, boarding houses and office buildings over which this department had no jurisdiction prior to May 2nd, 1905, the orders for the erection of fire escapes had been generally complied with, the exceptional cases being confined, principally, to hotels located in districts where the deputy factory inspectors had several counties to inspect, and where, instead of instituting proceedings for failure to comply with a former order, the inspector deemed it good policy to extend the time by the issuance of a new order. For this they have been subjected to the censure of the Department, and have been given explicit instructions not to repeat their orders for the erection of fire escapes, but to prosecute for every willful failure to comply with the first order by them issued. It might be well, however, to amend the penalty clause in the act regulating the erection of fire escapes. The present penalty of fine and imprisonment is so drastic, that in some cases it would be a cruel hardship to enforce the penalty. I think that a minimum and a maximum fine would meet all requirements, and that the penalty of imprisonment instead of being in the nature of an additional penalty, should be an alternative penalty to be imposed, in cases where the fine was not paid. No right thinking person can doubt of the necessity for the safe-guarding of lives by means of proper escapes from fire or panic. There are persons so circumstanced, however, that to them the erection of fire escapes upon buildings already constructed and in use is a source of great financial hardship. It does not seem just and equitable that the same punishment should be meted to them as to those who willfully neglect to comply with the law.

I am pleased to be able to state that not a single life has been lost nor a person injured by reason of the lack of fire escape protection in any district in which this department has jurisdiction over the erection of fire escapes.

INLAND LAKE NAVIGATION.

The vessels plying upon the inland lakes were again subjected to inspections during the past year. They are now sailing under the control of duly licensed officers and are fitted with all necessary life saving appliances.

No accident has been reported, nor has the attention of this Department been called to any violation of any of the rules laid down for the avoidance of accidents. With vessels equipped with life preservers, life lines and small boats, with the number of passengers carried limited to the safe carrying capacity of each vessel, with boilers and steam connections carefully inspected, with proper regard paid to the code of signals, and all under the control of engineers and pilots now licensed as competent persons, the risk attending inland lake navigation has been reduced to a minimum.

PROSECUTIONS.

There were seventy prosecutions instituted during the year.

For refusal to erect fire escapes there were 19 persons prosecuted; for employing children without employment certificates there were 16; for employing children under 14 years of age, 10; for obtaining employment certificates fraudently, 8; for employing children unable to read and write the English language, 5; for charging a compensation for issuing employment certificates, 1; for unsanitary conditions of bake-shops, 2; for refusal to erect dressing rooms and water closets for males and females, 4; for working more than 12 hours a day, 1; for not guarding machinery, 1; for not guarding elevators, 1; and for conducting workshops without permits, 2.

In some cases, where ignorance or extreme poverty rather than any willful intention to disobey the law, was in evidence, the penalty imposed was the payment of costs only, no fine being exacted. In other cases fines ranging from the minimum under the act of 1901 to $100 under the act of 1905 were imposed.

The sum of $1,362 was collected in fines and paid into the State Treasury, and there are cases pending by appeals in which fines imposed to the amount of $900 are involved.

Other prosecutions would have been instituted were it not that the law in some particulars is open to question on constitutional grounds.

Sections 5 and 6 of the act of May 2nd, 1905, was indirectly declared to be unconstitutional in an opinion handed down by Judge Rice, of the Superior Court, in a case involving sections, practically similar, and that were enacted to prohibit the employment of children in and about the anthracite mines. Asking the Attorney General to compare sections 5 and 6 of the act of May 2nd, 1905, with the sections of the Mine Law above referred to, his reply was, that the opinion of the Superior Court nullified sections 5 and 6 of the act of May 2nd, 1905.

When the bill was prepared which is now known as the act of May 2nd, 1905, the section, 5 and 6, which have caused so much trouble and annoyance were not in it. Instead there were two short and simple sections designed to place sure and constitutional safeguards around the employment of children. The bill thus prepared had met the approval of your Excellency, of the Attorney General, and of other lawyers of long experience and ability. But it was not prepared in accordance with the views of some faddists whose wonderful zeal for the protection of other person's children is unbounded by constitutional limitations. Hence the after insertion of the verbose, contradictory and unconstitutional sections that have been the cause of annoyance to school teachers, parents, children and employers, and that have in no instance proved to be a benefit.

WORKSHOPS CALLED "SWEATSHOPS."

Sections 14, 15 and 16 of the act of May 2nd, 1905, which changed all former acts relating to workshops have accomplished much that is good and have proven to be in no wise harmful.

For the year 1904 the inspection returns for 3,270 workshops were evidence of the fact that of these so-called workshops 2,003 were family abodes in which but one person and he or she—generally she—was employed. To waste the funds of the State and the time of the deputy factory inspectors upon inspections of such workshops was worse than useless; it was simply criminal. Had it been the purpose to drive such family workers away from their dwellings to seek employment in outside shops simply because their work at home might affect injuriously the wages of those engaged in like industries in outside shops, the intent would have been vicious and clearly in violation of constitutional rights. Had the purpose been to safe-guard the public against contagious and infectious diseases in dwelling houses, common prudence would have dictated that so important a matter should have been intrusted to the members of the Board of Health and not to deputy factory inspectors, wholly unskilled in medical science and the treatment of diseases contagious or otherwise.

Since I have been at the head of this Department the deputy factory inspectors have never reported a case of contagious or infectious disease in any of these so called workshop dwellings, have never dismissed children therein employed, if any; and in no particular has it been shown that such houses and their inmates were at any time in need of their questionable surveillance. Since the Department has been relieved from this labor the deputy factory inspectors have had less excuse for failing to devote their energies to lines of inspection more dignified and promising for better results for the Commonwealth.

The returns for 1905 show a total of 390 workshops existing under the act of May 2nd, 1905. As the larger number of these are in Philadelphia, and as they employ over 5,000 persons some of whom are employed upon or about dangerous machinery, and who have need of dressing rooms and separate toilets, there is need for thorough inspection. Seventeen of these shops were found in need of separate toilets, and one in need of a dressing room for females. The sanitary conditions in 102 were not up to the required standard. The proper orders were issued in all cases, and the compliances have been reported. In Pittsburg a number of places were reported as workshops instead of manufactories, the inspectors not discerning the true intent and meaning of the law regulating workshops. They were afterwards classified properly.

In that city there were found a number of petty cigar manufacturing concerns the sanitary conditions of which were anything but good. In some the conditions were filthy but nevertheless the cigars and stogies were being manufactured for and sold to the general buyer, and were not manufactured for other cigar manufacturing firms under sub contract or otherwise. The conditions found were owing to the greed of landlords rather than to the bad habits of the tenants who are poor persons seeking by honest methods to make a livelihood for themselves and families. They were ordered to cleanse the premises and in most instances did so. What is needed, though, is a tenement house inspection law as humane and drastic as that given to New York City by its former Governor, Mr. Roosevelt. It will be conceded that the poor we have with us always. It must also be conceded that the poor have but little choice in the selection of their tenements. Hence it follows that the owners and not the tenants of unsanitary dwellings are the proper persons upon whom the State should exercise its rightful and necessary authority.

It is a law of nature that mankind must work if they would live. It is an economic law under present conditions that a large portion of mankind cannot afford sanitary shops or dwellings in which to earn their bread. Landlords, many of them, take advantage of this and by refusing to make the necessary repairs subject the tenants to a censure that should fall upon themselves.

There is need of a tenement house inspection law.

By way of conclusion, I extend to His Excellency, the Governor of this Commonwealth; to the Members of the House and Senate; to the Attorney General and to the public press my sincere thanks for the aid and encouragement given by them to the work of this Department.

Respectfully submitted,

J. C. DELANEY,
Chief Factory Inspector.
